AN AVALANCHE IS COMING

Higher Education and the Revolution Ahead
1. Approaching capacity development in a more effective manner (in the context of massive and recent changes to our understanding of knowledge acquisition – the business of learning)

2. How UNITAR and its partners (through the GMG Capacity Development Task Force) may work to meet Member States’ capacity development needs as expressed in GFMD recommendations.
1. Online learning

2. Structured social learning

3. Competency-based instruction and certification
• What is capacity development (CD)?

• Distinction between:

  1. Learning issues/Acquiring skills

  2. Individual impact/Organisational change

• Weaknesses in approach to CD:

  ➢ Under-serviced sectors, regions

  ➢ Lack of ownership

  ➢ Donor-driven

  ➢ Lack of methodological rigour (M&E) – what is the true impact?
GMG Task Force on Capacity Development
1. Comprehensive inventory on what exists

2. Better approach to learning through knowledge workshops – peer assessments

- Coordination and support through KNOMAD Project
Proposals for PfP: .....
1. Reach out to GFMD Focal Point Network on training needs.

2. Prepare effective packaging of existing GMG publications and future training tools.

3. Offer more online course material, and hybrid learning opportunities.

4. Develop a standing GMG training curricula.

5. Explore through the GMG and KNOOMAD establishing an integrated training service platform.

6. Explore possibilities for certification in partnership with accrediting universities.
My hope for 2030 Campaign:

“As the global community rallies to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and to make progress toward a healthier, more prosperous world, Bill Gates... makes a powerful case for improving measurement tools and tactics so we can better determine what is working and what can be improved to deliver better results for people and communities everywhere. It is not enough to track progress or collect data. Our measurement must focus on catalyzing progress and fostering learning ...”
