• with or without their parents or other primary caregivers,
• and their movement might place them at an increased risk of:
  • economic exploitation,

• Home Land Security. Protecting migrant and forcibly displaced children from exploitation and abuse is to protect home land security,

• Integration Tool. In a regional economic integration context, investing in regional human resources = investing in own country’s human resources, and

• Attract Talented Migrants. Policies favorable for child rearing can help to attract talented migrants.
Migration and Thailand’s International Commitments to Regional and Global Initiatives

IDEAS organized a National Consultative Meeting on 4-5 April 2019 at the Shangri-La Hotel Bangkok.

More than 50 government officials from various relevant line ministries attended the consultative meeting.

An Assessment is planned for the third quarter, and the project is to be completed by the end of the year.
Integrated Data Ecosystem Assessment and Strengthening (IDEAS)

• IDEAS is a project jointly developed by NSO and UNICEF along with other UN partners with an aim to strategically improve migration data and, hence, to better protect migrant and displaced children,

• A toolkit will be developed to maps and assess gaps in data collection, data compilation, data analysis, data sharing and dissemination.

• Following the mapping and assessment, capacity development trainings will be organized to strengthen data capacity.

• The IDEAS project is in line with Thailand’s national strategy and priority to strengthen the national statistical system.
Issues and Data gaps

• With greater dependence on international migrant labor, Thailand has an increasing need to have better migration data for evidence-based policy formulation in order to achieve long-term sustainable development of the country.

• International agreement especially the SDG’s motto of “leaving no one behind” has placed an unprecedented demand for quality data to assess impacts of migration and to monitor progress toward fulfilling the agreements.

• Data on migrant and displaced children are particularly lacking.

• NSO collaborates with various UN Agencies including UNICEF, IOM, UNHCR and UNSD to address these data gaps.
